MORE CLASSICS

I was pleased to see a "Classics Corner" in the November-December issue of your magazine. I hope this means you will be increasing the number of classic movies in your programming.

Randall Richards
Canyon Country, CA

Yes, as part of Disney Night Time, we are presenting more classic films. Disney Night Time's The Best of Hollywood, Monday nights at 9:00 p.m. (EST/PST), is a special series of movie classics, leading off with a lineup of landmark musicals, followed by classics featuring various film genres and distinguished actors and directors. Classics will air on The Disney Channel at other times as well.

RICK NELSON CLOSES THE GENERATION GAP

I have had The Disney Channel for almost two years and have been satisfied with the programming and impressed with its quality.

I am writing with regard to the excellent program Rick Nelson: A Brother Remembers. I enjoyed it because I grew up in the age of rock 'n' roll. My children enjoyed it because it showed them that entertainers are people just like us.

Lin Anderson
Tillamook, OR

I want to tell you how much I enjoyed the special on Rick Nelson. I believe if Rick were around today he would see how many young people accept his music. I'm 25 years old and I enjoy his music. Rick was as innovative as his father. I also loved seeing the closeness of his family.

I only wish Rick could know that his music has bridged the generations.

HURRAH FOR COLLEGE BOWL

Thank you for restoring my faith in the intellectual capabilities of our youth. And for showing me just how much I don't know—but wish I did!

I'm referring, of course, to College Bowl. What a delight to once again view this highly entertaining and informative show. I'm thrilled to see Dick Cavett hosting also. All your programming is definitely worth watching. I've been recommending the Disney Channel to all my friends. My sincere thanks to all at The Disney Channel.

A POINT MISSED

The article on Harry Nilsson in the November - December issue failed to recognize the fact that The Point was also a play.

Ironically, Nilsson, who was relatively unknown at the time he wrote "Cuddly Toy" for the Monkees, would later have two of the band members, David Jones and Micky Dolenz, starring in the London production of the play.

Ann Lee
La Crescenta, CA

The Point was performed as a play several times following its animated television production in 1971. It was first staged by The Boston Repertory Theatre in 1973. Then there was the 1976 production at The Mermaid Theater in London in which David Jones and Micky Dolenz appeared. The Point was also staged in a Dublin theatre and by a theatre group in Rhode Island.

A REQUEST

Since I will soon be 82, I have a request. About 15 or 20 years ago, Disney had a movie Inky the Crow. It was a beautiful family movie, which I have never forgotten. Would you be kind enough to show it on The Disney Channel?

Sabina Lang
Bristol, CT

It happens that "Inky the Crow" is scheduled to air on Walt Disney Presents, February 3 at 11:30 a.m.

Jon Lovitz

Jon Lovitz is known to many for his comic "liar" routines on NBC's Saturday Night Live. He also provides the voice of the Radio in The Brave Little Toaster (turn to page 12). "It was a lot of fun," he says. His casting in the film took part during a hectic week: "I was up for a movie, trying out for Saturday Night Live, and reading for The Brave Little Toaster. As soon as I read for the part, I flew back for a final audition of Saturday Night Live. After I got the show, my schedule changed. I was to do the voice of the Radio over a three week period. I ended up doing it in a day."

Jeremy Brett, the star of The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes (see page 42), may have carved out a reputation as the most striking—and authentic—Sherlock Holmes of all. Yet Brett was initially quite reluctant to undertake the part. "It was the most dangerous thing I've ever done," declares the English thespian. "The role has been done to death, it was an old chestnut, and I thought it might be the end of my career."

Playing Sherlock Holmes wasn't the end of Brett's career—it garnered him much critical acclaim. About the character of the world's master sleuth, Brett observes: "He's a very complicated character. When you play Holmes you leave out love, you leave out affection. He is a walking brain who is very rude—he can't even say thank you."

In honor of Black History Month in February, The Disney Channel is showing a number of films about black history and the lives of blacks in America. Several of the films, such as Booker, And the Children Shall Lead, and Charlotte Forten's Mission feature remarkable actors. In Booker (see page 38),

Jeremy Brett

Shelley Duvall plays the teacher who first introduced a young, eager, and aspiring Booker T. Washington (played by Shavar Ross) to horizons that existed beyond the confines of slavery: to the world of reading, which kindled the young man's dreams. Duvall's part was one of her first acting roles since she began devoting career time as a producer.

"It was a good character," Duvall says. "I played the first person in Booker's life to open his eyes to the world of literature. It was a lot of fun." Duvall also appeared in last summer's romantic comedy Roxanne, playing the owner of a cafe, opposite Steve Martin. "I did it just to work with him," Duvall laughs, "and to see if I could still act."

Shelley Duvall

And the Children Shall Lead (see page 38) features Danny Glover. Glover's acting career has taken him from obscurity to the heights of stardom in a remarkably short time. He's made his mark with roles in such highly acclaimed films as Places in the Heart, Witness, The Color Purple and Lethal Weapon. Glover himself is at something of a loss in explaining his success.

"I preface everything by saying I'm blessed," he admits. "There are cats who can act circles around me, although I guess that's somewhat subjective. All you can do is your best. It seems to me that beyond the pragmatic way we proceed, there are other, special forces at work."

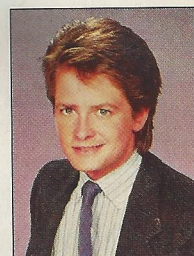

Danny Glover

The acclaimed series Palmerstown U.S.A. returns to The Disney Channel beginning February 16 at 8:00 p.m. (please turn to page 41). The program was one of the first acting jobs for a then unknown young Canadian named

Michael J. Fox. When Palmerstown U.S.A. went off the network airwaves, Fox was left in the position of many young actors: wondering what to do until the next role came along. "When the work stopped, I couldn't bring myself to go back home," Fox recalls of those desperate days. "I didn't want to be a failure. I may have been an idiot, banged my drum too loudly and I didn't want to go back home to face that."

Of course, Fox landed a role in an NBC series called Family Ties. The rest is history—the history of success—especially since Fox made his movie debut in the box-office block-buster Back to the Future.

Michael J. Fox

Melba Moore

Melba Moore is the superbly talented star of Charlotte Forten's Mission (turn to page 37). Moore burst on the scene with her Tony Award-winning performance in Purlie. A gifted singer, actress, and comedienne, Moore still finds that people are occasionally critical of her holding on to her own distinctive identity.

"There's always someone asking 'Why don't you sing like Dionne Warwick?' Or 'Why don't you sing like Chaka Khan?'" she says. "It's just fashion. If someone has created a trend, the most obvious thing to do is mimic it. I've never been a good mimic. There's something inside of me that says, 'If I'm just like the other person, you won't really hear me, you won't really see me, I'll disappear.' I've tried very hard to do what everybody said was the right thing, and always some little thing was missing. And it was an important little thing: me."

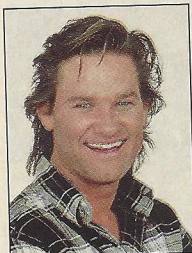

Kurt Russell appears on The Disney Channel in two of his most hilarious juvenile roles, the Disney comedies The Barefoot Executive and The Strongest Man in the World (the latter an exclusive Disney Channel premiere—see page 41). Russell, of course, made the transition from juvenile actor to leading man—thanks, in part, to his collaboration with director John Carpenter on Elvis, Escape From New York, and The Thing.

Kurt Russell

Russell's latest cinematic outing is Overboard, which premiered in theaters around the country in December. Kurt Russell's co-star in the romantic comedy is Goldie Hawn.

They're a couple offscreen as well as onscreen. Ironically, the two first met years back—on the set of Disney's The One and Only, Genuine, Original Family Band.

One of the stars of Disney's satirical spy flick Condorman (please turn to page 36) is Barbara Carrera. She's considered one of the great beauties among contemporary actresses, and has authored her own guide to health and beauty care for women. Carrera says, "I'm certainly vain about how I look—because that's how I make my money. I consider beauty a health look—great skin, shiny hair, sparkling eyes, good teeth." She also adds, "Real beauty, of course, comes from a person's inner radiance."

Barbara Carrera

Judd Hirsch (remember Taxi?) is one of the stars of First Steps. It's the story of a young woman's valiant attempts to recover from paralysis with the aid of a bioengineer (see page 44). Hirsch's latest film is Running on Empty, which co-stars Christine Lahti and River Phoenix. Hirsch and Lahti play a married pair of '60s radicals who are still on the run; Phoenix is their son who is disturbed at the family's peregrinations.

Judd Hirsch

Kathleen

Beller has the title role in Mary White (page 46). Mary was the daughter of a Pulitzer Prize-winning newspaper editor. It was Beller's first major role, and while she was praised for her performance, it did lead to Beller being typecast in young girl roles—though only for awhile. "I had trouble convincing people I was over 16."

Beller laughs today. "People told me to wait until I was 45."

EXPLORING • THE ARCHIVES

Dave Smith, archivist for The Walt Disney Company, answers questions and provides information about the company's history and its productions. The archives were established in 1970 to collect and preserve the company's historical materials.

Walt Disney's early character Oswald the Lucky Rabbit looks very much like Mickey Mouse. Were parts of Oswald used in designing Mickey?
—G.G., Chelmsford, MA

You are very observant. Walt Disney never said that he used elements of Oswald in designing Mickey Mouse, but it seems obvious from looking at the two characters that he did. Furthermore, both characters were drawn by the same man, Ub Iwerks.

Any resemblance here?

Why is the restaurant in Cinderella Castle at Walt Disney World named King Stefan's Banquet Hall when King Stefan was the father of Sleeping Beauty?

—D.B., Orlando FL

You are entirely correct in stating that King Stefan was Sleeping Beauty's father. Perhaps the designers of Fantasyland at Walt Disney World wanted the name of a king for the eatery, and since the king's name in Cinderella is not known, they picked Stefan. A number of visitors to the park have pointed out the inconsistency.

How many Disney characters are there?

—M.L., Charlotte, SC

Your question is difficult to answer. Are you including unnamed characters who appeared in Disney short cartoons and animated features, as well as named characters? And then there are the characters created for publications, for television, and for the theme parks. Because of all the minor unnamed characters in the 64 years of our company's history, it is almost impossible to come up with a complete list. There is a new book, however, which might be of help to you. It is the Encyclopedia of Walt Disney's Animated Characters, by John Grant, published by Harper & Row in 1987. You should be able to find it in bookstores everywhere.

Is T. Hee a real person? I have seen his name on the credits for Disney cartoons and have wondered if it was a joke.

—S.K., Montpelier, VT

Yes, T. Hee is a real person. It's a great name for an animation storyman, isn't it? T(hornton) Hee worked at the Disney Studio on and off for three decades, as director, stylist and storyman. He has also served as an animation instructor, and is renowned as a caricaturist.

Did the United States issue a postage stamp to honor Walt Disney?

—G.D., St. Paul, MN

The 6 cent commemorative stamp to honor Walt Disney was issued on September 11, 1968. The Archives recently acquired the original 1967 letter from then-Governor Ronald Reagan, written to the Postmaster General, suggesting that a stamp be issued for Walt Disney. Reagan wrote: "I hesitate to even mention California's pride in his vast accomplishments for fear of detracting from his true image as a world-renowned and world-beloved figure. There is no necessity for me to itemize his contributions to humanity; they can be summed up by simply saying that because of him the world is a richer, better place."

Disney Channel Trivia

- The train station used on the set of So Dear to My Heart had another life after the film was shot. Walt Disney gave the train station to Disney animator Ward Kimball, who has railroad tracks running down the driveway of his Southern California home. Kimball is an avid railroad buff, and enjoys surprising new neighbors by stoking up his full-size locomotive on a Sunday afternoon.
- A Billion for Boris is based on the book by Mary Rodgers, which was a sequel to Freaky Friday, filmed by Disney in 1977. Many of the characters in the two films are the same, but the casts are different.
- You can catch Kurt Russell in two of his Disney features, The Barefoot Executive and The Strongest Man In The World (p. 41). More recently, Russell provided the voice for Copper in The Fox And The Hound, soon to be reissued at your local theaters.
- As a footnote to Black History Month, the first actor in a Disney film to be recognized by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences was James Baskett, who played Uncle Remus in Song Of The South. He was presented with a special Oscar in 1947 for his portrayal of the wise storyteller.

A Trip to the Museum By Nicki Weiss

Taking children to a museum can be an exciting and enlightening experience for them, and for yourself as well. But sometimes a potentially positive visit is marred by parents' unpreparedness for it. A recent interview with Barbara Pollard, a museum education consultant, currently working at the Museum of the City of New York, and the mother of two young children, offers valuable information on making a trip to a museum with children pleasurable and uncomplicated.

Nicki Weiss: What are some basic steps parents should take in planning a trip to a museum with their children?

Barbara Pollard: Before going, parents should call ahead: Ask about prices. Find out about logistics, such as whether you can bring a stroller. Many museums allow strollers during the week, but not on weekends. Most museums don't allow strollers into special exhibitions, because more people are there. Some museums supply backpacks.

Don't rely on the museum's cafeteria or coffee shop. It may be crowded. The food may not be good, or not what your child wants. Take the time to put a snack together to bring along.

Parents going to a museum with children should plan to go for only a short time. If a parent wants to see something specific or wants to spend a long time,

A Big Idea Made Simple

A Note on Red Grammer and Black History Month

The films shown on The Disney Channel in honor of Black History Month in February raise complex issues and feelings. The designation of Black History Month is itself a complicated concept: To what extent is Black History a neglected part of American History, whose time for inclusion has long since come, and to what extent is it different? The teachers of Black History that we talked with about Black History Month expressed the feelings that both identities are important—black and American—and that it's important to recognize both similarities and differences between people.

This is one of the "big ideas" that children's performer Red Grammer (Kaleidoscope Concert) tries to make simple for kids in his songs. "You can take a big idea and make it real," he says. "You can find peace in daily things, like being open to someone different from you." Here are some of the words from his song "Hello":

... That's what friends are for.
Cause the differences are great and the differences are small but that's just part of the beauty of it all.

Friendships Help Children Grow

By Barbara Bronson Gray

What follows is the first in a series of short articles on early friendships. In the next issue: Friendship for the Preschooler.

Listening to the crazy banter and uninhibited laughter of two happy children at play can make parents long to return to those simple relationships of childhood. But first friendships are far more complex than they appear.

Even at six months of age, friendship is not just for fun. It plays an enormous role in the social and psychological development of children. Friendship builds a child's self-esteem; it teaches children to get along with others and to follow directions. Studies even show that children with social skills do better in school, an environment that involves getting along with a wide variety of people.

Parents can nurture and support their child's early friendships by understanding how these relationships challenge the growing child. With that knowledge parents can then help make their child's first friendships successful.

The experience of friendship does different things for children at various stages in their development. In infancy and toddlerhood, children learn to communicate with non-family members, and they explore the nature of play. At the preschool age, friendships help children practice their speech and communication skills. They also foster play, which helps a child to learn basic social skills, such

THE BRAVE LITTLE TOASTER

How animators brought five household appliances to life—and turned a contemporary fable into a heartwarming film.

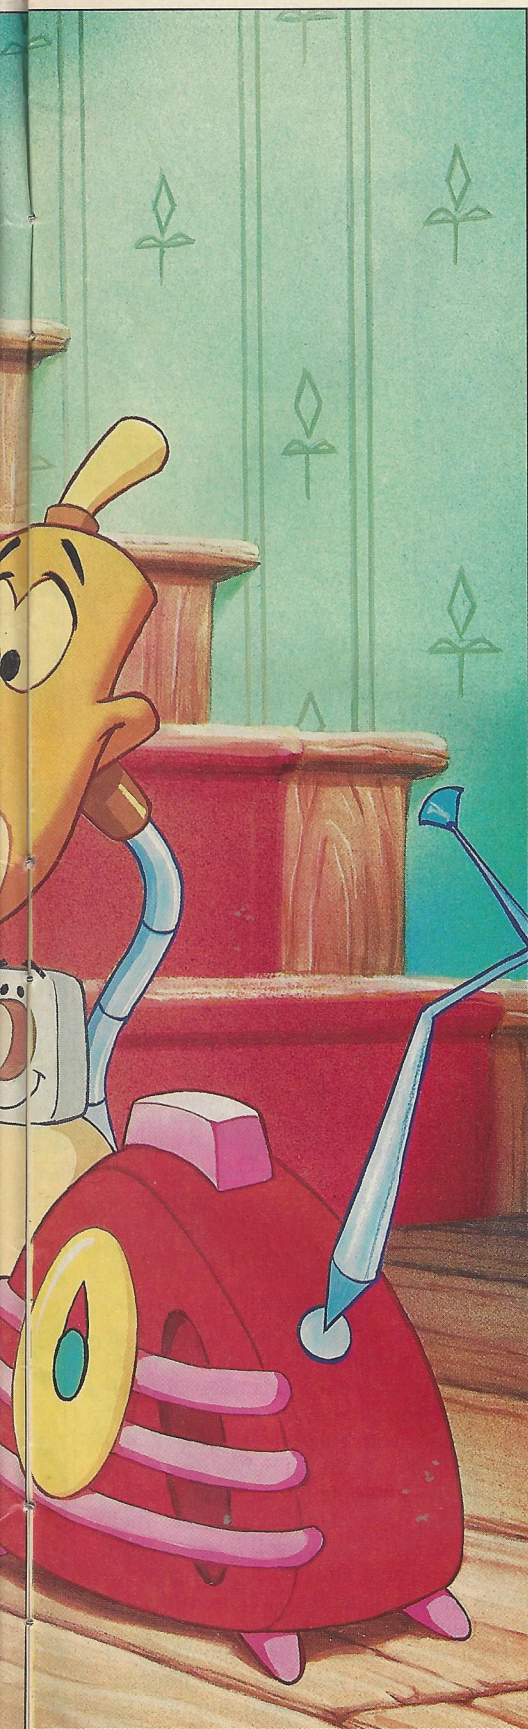

Illustration by Greg Martin

In 1980, award-winning science fiction writer Thomas M. Disch surprised his readers: a novella, The Brave Little Toaster, appeared in a science fiction magazine. The work was something of a departure for Disch. It was a charming fantasy about five aging appliances (a Toaster, a Blanket, a Lamp, a Radio, and a Vacuum Cleaner) who come to life and go in search of their missing master. Shortly thereafter, Doubleday issued the work as a "children's book" complete with illustrations. But as one reviewer observed at the time, "Buy it for your children; read it yourself."

Now The Brave Little Toaster has been translated into an animated film that shares the winning qualities of Disch's original story. This Disney Channel Discovery film receives its world television premiere on The Disney Channel on Saturday, February 27 at 7:00 p.m. (Eastern/Pacific time). Charles Solomon, a noted authority on animation, who viewed the film at the 1987 International Festival of Animation, described it in The Los Angeles Times as "an all too rare example of a new animated feature that all the members of the family can enjoy together."

Creating The Brave Little Toaster was a labor of love for all those involved, as well as a Herculean labor. After all how do you make household appliances into characters an audience can identify with—and love? The answer to that question is provided by Joe Ranft and Brian McEntee, who worked on the project from beginning to end.

"You start blank," quips Ranft, who co-wrote the script with director Jerry Rees. "Of course, one problem is the difference between writing and animation. Disch could, in his story, tell you what each appliance was thinking. In animation, you have to illustrate that."

Ranft and McEntee sifted through old catalogs, examining appliances. "The characters in the story were older models, so we looked at old Sears and Sunbeam catalogs," Ranft explains. "We were looking for models that could be translated into characters."

"The trick is how to anthropomorphize a toaster or a vacuum cleaner," Brian McEntee explains. "Take Mickey Mouse—what resemblance does he bear to a furry little creature? It's the details abstracted from a mouse and translated into a drawing that create his character."

Rees, Ranft and McEntee fleshed the characters out in much the same manner as actors creating roles. "We discussed the background of the characters, where they had come from, what they might do in the future," McEntee explains. "For Kirby the Vacuum Cleaner, we decided he'd been bought second hand, and treated badly by his first owner. That's why he is hesitant to search for the master."

"As you come to know and understand a character," Ranft explains, "the writing takes over. You know how the character will react in a situation."

THE DISNEY CHANNEL HONORS BLACK HISTORY MONTH

Films that depict heroes and ordinary people alike in their struggle for freedom air Tuesday evenings at 9:00, beginning February 2.

Love of freedom is the dominant and triumphant emotion expressed in all of the films selected to pay tribute to Black History Month in February. However, the films also tell touching human stories about other universal emotions: The love of family; the desire for an education; and the longing for peace. These are emotions everyone in the world shares and understands.

But there was a time when it was thought by many that black people didn't have these emotions—which, in an indirect way, is responsible for there being a Black History Month today. Here's how Lamont H. Yeakey, Ph. D., Associate Professor of History and Pan-African Studies at California State University—Los Angeles, explains black history and its relationship to American history.

"In American history, as it was written in the 19th century, blacks were either not treated at all or they were maligned," Yeakey explains. "Slavery was considered a big 'school' that helped Africans to adapt to the 'higher' civilization of the West. Whites thought that blacks were content with slavery because no matter how bad slavery was, it was better than life in Africa. This was the white supremacist view."

Then at the turn of the century two black historians, both Harvard-educated, planted the seeds for the beginning of change in American society's perception of blacks, according to Yeakey. William E. B. DuBois wrote many books on black history and culture, in an attempt to prove that black people had not been content with slavery, that they were the victims of circumstances; and that they possessed the same human feelings, needs, and emotions as whites. DuBois was also one of the founders of the NAACP in 1909.

Carter G. Woodson, the other noted black historian at the time, established The Association for the Study of Negro Life and History. Its Journal of Negro History provided a forum for a scholarly exploration of the contributions that black people had made to American history. The Association—now called The Association for the Study of Afro-American Life and History—is the sponsor of Black History Month.

The designation began as only a week—set aside in 1926 to honor the achievements of black Americans. The week of February 7 was chosen because it included the birthdates of both Frederick Douglass and Abraham Lincoln. Then in 1965, at the height of the Civil Rights Movement, the celebration became Black History Month. Its several goals, according to the Association, are 1) To enable children (and adults) to learn about black contributions to U.S. and world history. 2) To instill racial pride. 3) To explore the diversity of Afro-American culture.

A note about the various names—negro, black, Afro-American. When Woodson set up the Association, the commonly used word for black people was negro, or colored. "Blacks as well as whites shunned associations with references to black and African," says Yeakey. "But as time went on and black people became knowledgeable about their African heritage, they began to feel a sense of pride in that heritage. 'Black' and 'Afro-American,' as terms of identification, became not only acceptable but desirable."

Each year's Black History Month has a theme, this year's being the Constitutional status of the Afro-American into the 21st century. Yes, the 13th Amendment abolished slavery, the 14th Amendment defined citizenship, and the 15th Amendment gave blacks the right to vote. But the Constitution is subject to interpretation. American history is filled with legal cases brought by blacks who were not, in the end, protected by the Constitution. Congressional laws are then passed to uphold rights that the Constitution has failed to protect. The Voting Rights Act, for example, has come up for review again and again, most recently when it was finally passed by the House and Senate in 1985, more than a hundred years after the Constitution had supposedly guaranteed blacks the right to vote.

BLACK HISTORY MONTH

In the black man's pursuit of his own freedom and history he has raised some of the most important questions about democracy, and about the freedom, equality and justice for all Americans. The struggle for freedom has gone on for more than two hundred years, and isn't through yet. Each of the films on The Disney Channel takes place at a different time in history, and reflects a new variation of the same old struggle.

Three of the films are about heroes of black history. Solomon Northup's Odyssey, based on Northup's diaries, is about his having been kidnapped and sold to a white slave trader in 1841. At the time Northup was a free man, a musician, a husband, and father. Charlotte Forten's Mission: An Experiment in Freedom tells of Charlotte Forten, from a well-to-do black Philadelphia family, who went South to help slaves freed early in the Civil War. Booker portrays Booker T. Washington as a boy, fighting to educate himself just after the Civil War, when there were no schools for black children.

Sounder, based on a highly acclaimed young people's novel, takes place during The Depression in the South. And the Children Shall Lead takes place in Mississippi during the 1960s.

Will black history eventually have its rightful place in American history, so that the distinction between the two histories can be dropped? Lamont Yeahey replies: "We're on the precipice of that now," he responds. "History books are being written differently than they used to be. The ideal would be to have one history. But, on the other hand, it's important to respect people's ethnic backgrounds. One of the benefits of the black movement is that it has helped everyone with his or her own ethnicity. It's important to understand that people are different, one from another. The real differences, however, are in the areas of talent and morality. It doesn't have to do with skin. Anyway when we go abroad, we're all referred to as Americans. We all look for McDonald's." 🐻

Which leads to a major point in creating an animated character: the actor who gives it voice. "We were familiar with the Groundlings [an acclaimed Los Angeles theater and improvisational group], and I'd taken their classes," Ranft says. "We held a reading with the script. They were great. Jon Lovitz (currently seen on NBC's late night comedy series Saturday Night Live) as the Radio brought back the voice of radio's golden age. He raised the character to new heights."

McEntee points out, "We were worried about the voice for Blanky. We wanted a certain voice. Then one day this perfect nine-year-old [Timothy E. Day] came in and read. We said, 'That's the voice.'"

"We originally thought of the Toaster as being male," McEntee continues. "We had experienced people read, but when they read, it was with a voice that they thought reflected the toaster's character. Then Deanna Oliver [also a Groundling member] came in. And she was perfect, she had the character's emotion. As Jerry Rees says, she sounded warm and toasty."

Once voices had been cast and characters created, the project moved toward the goal of creating final animation. Ranft went from being a storyman to supervising a team of animators. McEntee served as the film's art director. Disney veteran A. Kendall O'Connor, whose work on Disney classics went back to Snow White, served as the film's color stylist.

The result is an animated film of wit, charm and beauty. Both Ranft and McEntee point with pride to one central sequence in the film: lost in the forest, the characters take shelter for the night under the Blanket, who has transformed himself into a tent. There's a gentle and human exchange between the Toaster and the Blanket—who has been harshly treated at times by his companions. Of this newfound warmth the Blanket, the Radio inquires of the Toaster, "What's this thing between you and the Blanket?"

"That's my favorite scene," McEntee says simply. "Everything works. Jerry Rees's directing, his editing, his work with the animators, just brings that scene and those characters to life." Ranft adds, "When animation works, the characters live. You can see into them; you can see their heart."

The Brave Little Toaster offers Disney Channel subscribers a rare opportunity. Like Thomas Disch's original novella, it is a work that spans all ages. Youngsters will delight in the story—and gasp at its suspenseful moments; older viewers will enjoy the film's wit and the characters' verbal byplay. Or as Brian McEntee says, "People think animation is for children. Animation is for kids—and for everyone else, too." 🐻

At 4½ she's reading 3rd grade books

a child prodigy? not at all! your child, too can be reading one, two or three years beyond present age level... even if a "poor" reader now

Prove it to yourself . . . with this 10 day free trial!

Reading is fun for Sarah—as it should be for every child. At age four-and-a-half, she's already choosing her own books at the San Diego, Cal. library.

She reads books many third graders find "hard going." Yet she won't enter first grade for another year.

Sarah is typical of thousands of children who learned to read with "Listen and Learn with Phonics"—a reading kit that actually makes reading fun.

"Listen and Learn with Phonics" was developed by a reading expert. It has been endorsed, after extensive testing, by teachers, schools, and educators.

This practical (and inexpensive) home-learning kit fascinates eager young minds from three to ten. The child hears the letters or sounds on a cassette, sees them in a book and then repeats them. This makes an absorbing game of better reading — with amazing results.

For example: Slow or average readers show sudden—often spectacular—improvement in reading and spelling. Older children often advance their reading skills several years beyond their age level. Young "pre-schoolers" actually teach themselves to read by this simple but startlingly effective method.

WHAT OTHERS SAY

I am tremendously pleased. My 5-year old is reading very well and I plan to begin with my 4-year old. I am so glad I invested in this set. Judy L. Gay, Stow, Oh.

Last year I taught grades 1-4. I had a 6-year old boy who came to 1st grade reading 6th-grade words. His father had taught him at home using your set. The father donated the set to our school. I was thrilled because some of the children need a lot of extra help with reading and phonics.

Janet Griffin, Triangle School, Apex, N.C.

What a happy Grandma I am! Since I ordered a Phonics set and had it mailed to my granddaughter, Kim, and her 6-year old sister, they are both making A's in school. Mrs. Clarence Sparks, Clearwater, Fl.

Lights, cameras, color, today's hit videos and pop music—that's The Disney Channel's brand new dance show for older kids, hosted by Randy Hamilton.

COVER STORY

VIDEOPOPOLIS

When Videopolis opened at Disneyland in June 1985, it was an instant hit with teenagers—and it still is. Each night hundreds of Southern California teens, as well as young visitors from around the world, come to Videopolis. That's not surprising.

The futuristic dance club features live bands and music videos, concert lighting, a state-of-the-art sound system, and a full range of visual effects. Perhaps most impressive are the 12-foot by 16-foot video screens looming overhead, complemented by 90 television monitors which wrap around the dance floors in a video "wallpaper" effect.

Inspired by the Disneyland attraction, The Disney Channel has created its own Videopolis—a dance show for older kids, featuring today's hottest songs and videos, popular guest performers, such as The Jets, and a whole lot more.

Videopolis is hosted by actor Randy Hamilton and produced by Solid Gold producer Brad Lachman. It premieres February 5 with an hour-long special at 6:00 p.m. (EST/PST), and then moves the following week to its regular time slot as a half-hour series every Friday at 5:30 p.m. (EST/PST).

"Even though each show will feature a live guest artist, the kids are the real stars," says Lachman. "We've invited many of the teens who made Disneyland's Videopolis such a hit to be regulars. As the weeks go by the viewers will get to know them. A lot of the fun in viewing the show is watching the kids have such a great time."

The Videopolis regulars actively participate in the show in all sorts of ways.

Before each show they vote for videos they would like to see. During the show, they interview that day's guest performer. They show their fancy foot work in contests and during spotlight dances. A regular segment of the show cuts to Disneyland's Videopolis and the goings on there, emceed by Disneyland's own disc jockey.

Viewers at home can get in on the act, too, by sending in their own home video dedications. These Videograms, from a boy or girl dedicating a song, will be aired during the show to introduce the appropriate video.

Another element which sets Videopolis apart from other dance shows, according to Lachman, is its use of music videos instead of single records. The constant intercutting of the video with shots of audience dancers creates a whole new fast-changing, energetic image: Videopolis becomes its own intriguing video.

Though Videopolis is packed with music, producer Lachman also promises that the show is big on surprises. Unusual elements range from a competition between nationally ranked high school cheerleading squads to impromptu appearances by Christopher, a dancer accompanied by four life-sized mannequins who dance in perfect synchronization to his every move.

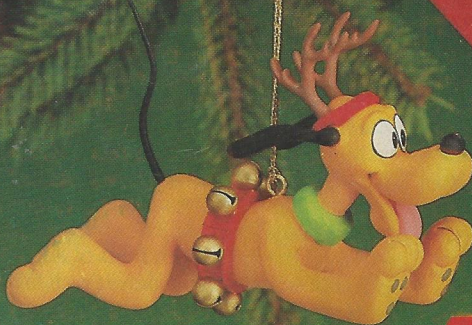

Lachman's choice of Randy Hamilton as host seems a natural one. "For me Randy was the perfect choice," says Lachman. "He's interested in both music and kids. He's sensitive to what they have to say and doesn't talk down to them." The actor has served as host of Kids Are People Too as well as having appeared on such television series as Dynasty and Webster.

Coordinating the many varied elements of a show like Videopolis can be a complicated task, but to producer Lachman the goal of the show is anything but complicated. "The premise of Videopolis is very simple—to have fun." ♡

KALEIDOSCOPE CONCERTS

"You can't tell people to feel good, you have to just take them there,"
says singer/songwriter Red Grammer.

Red Grammer exudes just as much warmth and enthusiasm when he talks as he does when he sings. In an interview with The Disney Channel Magazine, Red, who splits his time between performing as lead singer with the famous "Limelitters" (he replaced Glenn Yarborough in 1981) and doing children's and family concerts, talked excitedly about the latter: "I want to give children and their parents a situation where they're having a blast and are talking about getting along. I love the euphoria that people feel when they feel great about each other. 'Are people floating out the door at the end of my concert?' That's what I ask myself because that's my job as a performer."

Floating? Well, Red Grammer may be asking too much of himself with that expectation. But audiences love him. When Red Grammer is on stage for the second Disney Channel Kaleidoscope Concert, premiering February 26 at 6:00 p.m., children and parents alike are riveted. He is warm and lively; and his songs, co-written with his wife Kathy, are fun and funny and, yes, they do make his audience feel good.

The songs that Red and Kathy write are socially conscious. They're about being open, tolerant, and solving problems, but they're always fun. In fact, that's what Red Grammer believes in: being good but having fun. "Being the best you are is fun," he insists. "It's exciting, interesting and challenging. Being good is not being passive, as many of us were schooled. Being good is a very active state. It's reaching out; figuring things out; and thinking that's neat." Red Grammer's credo: "It can be good." ♥

Red Grammer's audiotapes "Can You Sound Just Like Me" and "Teaching Peace" are in stores, but can also be ordered from Smilin' Atcha Music, 939 Orchard Street, Peekskill, NY 10566; $9.73 includes postage and handling.

THE HOBBIT

Based on J.R.R. Tolkien's novel, this animated film follows the adventures of Bilbo Baggins, the Hobbit, who lives in the time known as Middle Earth. Baggins is recruited by Gandalf the Wizard to aid Thorin and his dwarfs in recovering a lost treasure from the dragon Smaug. (1:20) Mar. 5, 9

The Best of Hollywood

AN AMERICAN IN PARIS

Gene Kelly, Leslie Caron and Nina Foch star in Vincente Minnelli's splendid musical based on the music of George and Ira Gershwin. Kelly is the artist torn between a Parisian girl (Caron) and a wealthy, older woman (Foch). Not to be missed is the film's stunning fantasy ballet sequence. An American in Paris received eight Oscars. (1:53) Feb. 29

WILDERNESS BOUND

This exclusive Disney Channel nature series focuses on wild life of all sorts. This Monday at 8:00 p.m., A World You Never See uses time-lapse and microphotography to examine such subjects as fungi and miniature spiders at work.

MEET ME AFTER THE SHOW

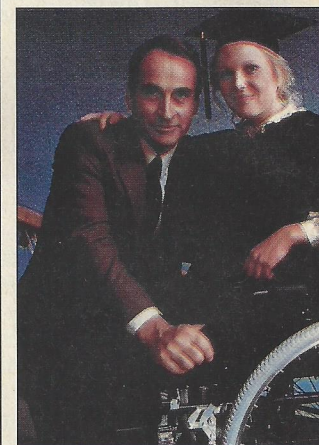

Betty Grable plays a stage actress who questions her husband's fidelity—so she quits her show, feigns amnesia, and takes up with another man in this musical comedy. (1:27) Feb. 28; Mar. 3, 8

THE BOY WHO LOVED TROLLS

Sam Waterston stars in this special film about a boy who looks under bridges to see if trolls are real. The trouble is that the boy's fantasies get mixed up with reality—and he must at last choose between the two. (1:00) Mar. 4, 8, 12

FIRST STEPS

This inspiring film is the true story of Nan Davis (portrayed by Amy Steel). In 1978, Nan was paralyzed in an auto accident. It appeared that she would never walk again. But then Nan was fortunate to meet bioengineer Jerry Petrofsky (Judd Hirsch), who studied how to control muscles by using computers. Jerry pushed Nan into an experiment to see if she could walk again, hoping she would in time for her college graduation (1:40) Mar. 4, 10

KID COLTER

A young boy goes to see his divorced father (country and western star Jim Stafford) after the boy's school closes. But en route, the lad becomes entangled with criminals who may be spies. They kidnap the boy and take him to a remote mountaintop. Escaping, the lad not only survives, but also thwarts the criminals. (1:41) Mar. 4, 7, 12

THE NEW ADVENTURES OF WINNIE THE POOH

Join Pooh and his pals for new adventures in the Hundred Acre Wood in this Disney Channel animated series, which airs every Saturday and Sunday morning at 8:30 a.m. (EST/PST).

THUNDER IN THE CITY

In this delightful comedy, Edward G. Robinson plays an American promoter in London who gambles on a long shot: a new wonder substance called Magnalite. Robinson proceeds to stun English society as he promotes Magnalite with all the energy and flair of a latter-day P.T. Barnum. (1:26) Mar. 3, 9

MARY WHITE

Pulitzer Prize-winning newspaper editor William Allen White, in grief over the accidental death of his 16-year-old daughter, expressed his feelings of loss in the way he knew best: in a newspaper editorial. This heartwarming film, starring Kathleen Beller as Mary White, is based on that eloquent editorial. (1:40) Mar. 12

THE LAST HURRAH

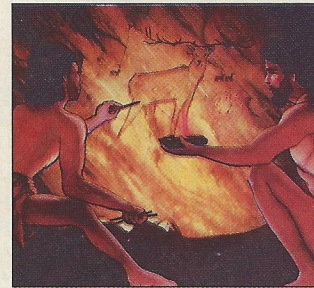

Spencer Tracy plays Frank Skeffington, an old-fashioned political boss seeking reelection as mayor—his “last hurrah” as a politician. In the role of aging politico, Tracy delivers one of the finest performances of his career. Under John Ford's direction, the film is an absorbing study of politics and people, with a star-studded cast that includes such luminaries as Jeffrey Hunter, Diane Foster, Pat O'Brien, and Basil Rathbone. (2:01) Feb. 2, 8, 19

ZORRO

Out of the night when the moon is bright rides Zorro on his steed Tornado! Guy Williams stars as the crusader of Old California who fights injustice, weekends at 12:30 p.m. (EST/PST).

PREHISTORIC WORLD

Dinosaurs are a fascinating subject, and Gary Owens and Eric Boardman make learning about them fun and funny, as well as interesting. This fourth installment of our lighthearted documentary series about dinosaurs focuses on prehistoric mammals. (0:30) Feb. 5, 13, 21; Mar. 5, 11

THE SILENT ONE

This unusual and touching family film tells the story of a baby washed ashore in a small boat, raised by a woman in the village, but believed by the rest of the villagers to be demonic because he's deaf. Then he befriends a white sea turtle, also thought to be a demon. (1:36) Mar. 7

ONE IN A MILLION

A timely offering to accompany this winter's Calgary Olympics is this film starring one of the winter Olympics' all-time greats—Sonja Henie. In this, her film debut, she is discovered by a theatrical manager while preparing for the Olympics in Switzerland. After much complication, he finally succeeds in bringing her to Madison Square Garden, where she triumphs. It's fun, with a fine supporting cast: Adolphe Menjou, Don Ameche and others.

The Best of Hollywood

FIDDLER ON THE ROOF

Israeli actor Topol received an Academy Award nomination for his role as Tevye, the family father who struggles to preserve Jewish heritage against growing odds. "Tradition," one of the melodic score's many notable songs, provides the cornerstone for this dramatic and heartwarming film. (3:01) Mar. 7

THE HOUSE OF DIES DREAR

When a black family moves into an old house, the caretaker seems determined to drive them away. They soon learn why: The house is believed to be haunted by its first owner, Dies Drear, a Dutch abolitionist who was involved with the underground railroad and was murdered. The House of Dies Drear is based on an acclaimed children's novel by Virginia Hamilton. Friendships as how (and when) to stand up for toys, turns or issues, and how to compromise.

By elementary school, friendships serve to perfect these skills. As children start to spend more time at their friends' homes, their friendships help them develop independence and teach them the differences—as well as similarities—between themselves and others.

The nature of a child's friendships can vary depending on the context. Some friendships are tied to structured situations, such as a play group, or a baseball team, and others, such as those in the neighborhood, are more free form.

Neighborhoods offer kids a more mixed-age atmosphere—more like the real world. Children get a chance for less organized, more let's-go-out-in-the-sandbox sort of play. And neighborhood play is also a little more hidden from adults, free from the observing eyes of play yard or the classroom.

Just as friendship has a different function for children at each developmental level, the role of parents changes as the child's needs change. Parents go from total supervision (and control) in the early years of a child's life to a looser involvement during elementary school: one of establishing guidelines and preparing children for a range of different situations.

A Trip to the Museum

he or she should go at another time, without children.

NW: Do you have any suggestions for what to do when arriving at the museum?

BP: First of all, parents need to explain to their child why he or she shouldn't touch anything: Things can break. We want to protect it so others can enjoy it. Dirt on fingers can dirty the object.

Second, ask someone at the information desk if the museum has self-guided material for children. Many museums supply such guides for children: museum tours in the forms of treasure hunts, word games, and puzzles.

Third, it's important that parents not follow a definite itinerary. Parents should allow enough time so that if a child becomes distracted by an object along the way, the parent can detour from the planned course. Children should be made to feel comfortable in museums. Which brings up another point: parents shouldn't make the visit to the museum a history lesson, or expect the child to come away with any particular piece of knowledge. The emphasis should be on making the outing a pleasant experience, so the child will want to go back.

NW: How can parents help their children view the exhibits?

BP: To begin with, parents should look at the objects, not the labels. There's no reason to emphasize dates or names of artists but rather it's important to let the child enjoy what he sees. Some parents are intimidated themselves and this affects the child. A parent should not feel uncomfortable; museums are there for everyone, not just for scholars. Parents should go to the child's level. For three to five year olds, parents can point out shapes and colors in objects. They can talk about feelings: Is the person in the painting happy or sad? What is he doing in the picture? With a Jackson Pollack one could ask: Was he relaxed? Angry? Did he use a big can of paint? Parents can point out how things are made or perhaps relate the materials or methods used to materials the child has used in school.

For children five to ten years old and up, "period rooms" can stimulate thinking about how we live today, compared with earlier times. They can see the differences in furniture, clothing, modes of transportation, and so on.

For children who take a real interest in what they see in the museum there may be "drop-in" programs at the museum: a discovery room, or art classes. There may be after-school, holiday or summer programs.

For high school students there may be an intern program at the museum.
